ALL-IN-ONE TOOL

Engg students' Vishu gift for farmers

JESTIN ABRAHAM @Kozhikode

AS their peers prepare for final-semester exams, four mechanical engineering students of St Thomas College of Engineering and Technology in Mattannur are chasing a bigger dream — a start-up company of their own with a product that could revolutionise the agriculture sector.

P S Abhishai, N Lipin, N Rijun and K Akshay have come up with a prototype of an all-in-one tool, this Vishu season, which they tout as a solution to the major woes of small- and medium-scale cultivators all over the country. It is equipped with necessary tools to help cultivators at various levels of farming from ploughing, sowing, weeding, irrigation, harvesting; milling and winnowing.

"It is a common scene in our locality where cultivators are worried about the availability of machines or labourers for harvesting and other processes. There are many labourers who suffer losses due to the above factors. Our machine is a solution to all their woes," said Abhishai.

According to him, no machines are currently available in the market to address the myriad problems of farmers. ● More on P6
